

THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO

Dean of the Harris School of Public Policy

Leadership Profile

Fall 2023

WittKieffer

Executive Summary

The University of Chicago – one of the world's preeminent institutions of discovery, learning, and impact – seeks a visionary, engaged, and strategic leader deeply committed to social science and public policy education to serve as Dean of the Harris School of Public Policy.

The University of Chicago has driven new ways of thinking since 1890. Its commitment to free and open inquiry draws scholars from around the country and the world and generates ideas that challenge and change the world. The University provides its community with the intellectual freedom necessary to push boundaries and convention. In this culture of constant questioning through open and spirited debate, scholars and learners are positioned to do their best work, continually break new ground, and explore new ideas. Within this context, University of Chicago students are taught how to think, not what to think. A University of Chicago education is transformative. Students do more than merely acquire knowledge; they develop the critical skills necessary to examine, understand, and challenge ideas and assumptions—including their own. It is a proficiency they develop in the classroom and will use throughout their careers and their lives.

The Irving B. Harris Graduate School of Public Policy Studies (Harris) embodies the ideals of the University of Chicago and applies them to the field of public policy. The policy challenges of today take innovative people who gather and analyze the data, discover the facts, and put forth clear-eyed recommendations to help society make evidence-based policy and governance decisions. The Harris faculty offer a curriculum that transforms students into such thinkers and empowers them to achieve their utmost potential as highly effective, dedicated, and serious-minded policy professionals. Harris faculty are also engaged in the policy issues of our time. They create and adopt new methodologies in collaboration with partners across the private, public, and nonprofit sectors to drive better solutions.

Harris is home to 53 full-time faculty, more than 1,300 students, and boasts 5,000 alumni across the globe. Harris offers a variety of academic programs including a Master of Public Policy (MPP), MS in Computational Analysis and Public Policy, MA in Public Policy with a Certificate in Research Methods, MA in Public Policy, a part-time evening Master's Program, and two PhD programs. In addition, Harris offers various certificate programs and joint degrees with other schools at the University including the Booth School of Business, Law School, Crown Family School of Social Work, Policy, and Practice, and the Division of the Social Sciences.

The new Dean will envision, plan, and advocate for the future of Harris, defining new possibilities for success and a new level of excellence. To support that future, the Dean will create a more robust and sustainable business model and increase philanthropy. The Dean will actively engage faculty to enhance excellence in research and teaching and provide personal leadership to create a more diverse and inclusive environment where each member of the Harris community can thrive.

As a faculty member, the Dean must be a scholar with a profile and achievements commensurate with the rank of Professor with tenure at the University of Chicago. The Dean must be deeply committed to, and curious and passionate about, the science of public policy, engaging faculty, students, and alumni across fields and disciplines. The Dean must develop a plan for continuing to provide an exceptional student experience. The Dean must uphold the values of the University of Chicago including the practice of rigorous inquiry and free expression. The Dean's personal and institutional commitment to diversity and inclusion must be strong and visible.

To submit a nomination or express personal interest in this position, please see the Procedure for Candidacy at the end of this profile.

Role of the Dean

The Dean of the Irving B. Harris Graduate School of Public Policy Studies is the chief academic leader and administrative officer of Harris, responsible for all matters related to the administration of the school. This includes academics; finances; leadership of faculty, other academic appointees, and staff; philanthropy, alumni relations, and community relations; and collaboration across the University of Chicago and the wider academy. As one of the 12 University Deans who oversee the academic divisions and professional schools, the Dean of Harris reports to the Provost.

The Dean has the overarching responsibility to define the strategic vision and establish priorities for Harris, a task that must be undertaken in alignment with the University's vision and direction, and in collaboration with a broad range of constituents. As the school's academic leader, the Dean encourages and promotes opportunities for scholarly growth; pedagogical innovation; curricular and academic programming development; and exceptional mentoring among faculty and students. As Harris' chief administrative officer, the Dean is responsible for managing the school's fiscal resources to achieve its strategic priorities and long-term sustainability. The Dean ensures a diverse, inclusive, and welcoming environment within Harris and the University of Chicago community.

The Dean works to foster interdisciplinary collaboration and to create and strengthen partnerships on a local, national, and global scale. More broadly, the Dean serves as a public voice for Harris, communicating its goals, accomplishments, and initiatives within the University of Chicago, and to a public beyond the University.

The Dean's current leadership team comprises the following individuals:

- Deputy Dean for Faculty and Research
- Deputy Dean for Academic Programs
- Chief Operating Officer and Senior Associate Dean
- Senior Associate Dean of Student Recruitment and Global Outreach
- Senior Associate Dean for Academic and Student Affairs
- Dean of Students
- Associate Dean of Communications and Marketing
- Associate Dean of Alumni Relations and Development
- Assistant Dean of Diversity and Inclusion

Opportunities and Expectations for Leadership

■ Envision, plan, and advocate for the future of Harris

The new Dean of Harris will articulate a clear-sighted vision for the school, defining what success will look like for students, faculty, and staff over the next decade. This vision will fortify and advance the school's current areas of focus and strength, both academic and operational, defining a new level of excellence. The vision should include a coherent articulation for why a student should come to Harris, and should reflect the curriculum, faculty, and the extracurricular programming of the School, and our place in the broader University of Chicago community. This vision should include a plan to provide an outstanding student experience including supporting their varied professional aspirations, to grow faculty and to bolster current academic strengths, to build and diversify revenue streams, and to leverage the Harris' operational strength.

In developing and achieving the vision for Harris, the Dean will advocate for faculty, staff, and students within the University of Chicago by building productive relationships with the Provost and the President, and by working effectively with other deans and academic leaders. The Dean will ensure that Harris is represented in important conversations about the future of the University and academic initiatives where Harris can and should play a strong and influential role.

■ Develop a long-term business model and increase philanthropy to support the future of Harris

Harris has grown tremendously in recent years, largely supported by tuition revenue. The new Dean will prioritize the development of a long-term business model to ensure academic excellence and the long-term fiscal health of the School. In developing this model, the Dean will take into consideration several elements: the composition of the student body; the portfolio of academic programs to ensure that the School remains contemporary and competitive in its offerings; and the priority of fundraising, to fund current needs and build the endowment, among other opportunities. The Dean will develop a thoughtful, clear, long-term financial plan and strategy to support the School's continued excellence.

The Dean will make fundraising a priority, collaborating with the President, Provost, Vice President for Alumni Relations and Development, and others to develop and pursue transformational gift opportunities. The University of Chicago benefits from a deep tradition of philanthropic support and the generosity of alumni and friends who believe in the power of the faculty and students to address some of the world's most pressing problems. To achieve success, the Dean must bring to this work a compelling vision, the ability to communicate persuasively about faculty research and opportunities for collaborations, new ideas, and the willingness to commit the time and energy to cultivate long-term relationships. In concert with University-wide efforts, the Dean will ensure that the infrastructure is in place to invigorate ongoing advancement activity in support of the School's mission.

■ Engage with Harris faculty in pursuit of excellence

The Dean will have deep and broad intellectual curiosity and desire to engage with, understand, support, and bolster excellence among all faculty and across the range of disciplines and within Harris. The Dean will exhibit a passion for multi-disciplinary engagement and possess the ability to bring together scholars from across various disciplines, both internal and external to Harris, to forge new intellectual pursuits. The Dean will prioritize building authentic, communicative, collegial relationships that will engender faculty's buy-in and support for the School-wide priorities and directions that will enable Harris to achieve its aspirations. Active engagement of the Dean in the academic life of Harris will enable the Dean to best support students and their interests, bolster faculty in their academic pursuits, connect donors and faculty to pursue new philanthropic opportunities, and enable and extend collaborations across the campus and beyond.

■ Advance the University of Chicago's values

Harris has a responsibility to create an extraordinary curricular and co-curricular program that supports every student in becoming the most effective, serious-minded, and successful policy professional they can be, regardless of their point of view, area of interest, career ambitions or skill set when they join the institution. The University of Chicago believes diversity is critical to the process of discovery—differing ideas, viewpoints, and perspectives are not only sought after and encouraged, but they are also the building blocks that make rigorous inquiry possible. The Dean will actively advance initiatives to ensure an inclusive and welcoming environment where each member of the Harris community can thrive.

Harris has a unique pool of students: a diverse domestic population and a large group of international students (around half of the student body), around 35% of whom are from a single country—China. This creates a unique set of considerations and opportunities for students to learn from others with different backgrounds, perspectives, and expertise. The next Dean must create an inclusive environment in which all students feel valued, welcomed, and able to express their opinions and learn from each other.

Professional Qualifications and Personal Qualities

The University of Chicago seeks in the next Dean of the Irving B. Harris Graduate School of Public Policy Studies an eminent scholar who is also a visionary, collaborative, and strategic leader with a deep commitment to public policy as a science, based on rigorous analysis and measurable impact.

To lead Harris, the next Dean will need to possess the following qualities and qualifications:

- Vision: The ability to build a vision around Harris' areas of excellence, consolidating, and building upon the School's recent growth. The capacity to articulate this vision and organize Harris around a strategic plan for faculty, curriculum, programming, and staff.
- Fundraising: An energetic and entrepreneurial approach to identifying and creating fundraising opportunities, identifying potential donors who are not currently affiliated with Harris or the University in addition to stewardship of existing donors. The desire to develop a deep understanding of the academic strengths of the faculty and the ability to translate this research into a compelling case for philanthropic support linked to the donors' interests and passions. An enthusiasm for fundraising and building long-term donor relationships.
- Academic excellence: A scholar with a deep appreciation for research in a multidisciplinary context. Demonstrated respect for research and researchers from across the disparate fields of social science.
- Commitment to student experience: A strong commitment to ensuring that all students leave Harris feeling that they have received a first-rate educational experience.
- Entrepreneurship: The energy, enthusiasm, and creativity to find and create new opportunities for the Harris School and bring them to fruition.
- Managerial experience: The acumen and skills required to manage the faculty and a professional school staff.
- Advocacy for Harris on campus: The capacity to articulate a vision for Harris and communicate it to others on campus and secure support for that vision. A demonstrated commitment and track record of creating initiatives or expanding joint initiatives with other units on campus.
- Appreciation of the University of Chicago's culture: The ability and enthusiasm to internalize and cultivate the University of Chicago's distinctive culture of rigor, open inquiry, and academic excellence, and use this to strengthen Harris and enhance its contributions to teaching and research.
- Commitment to diversity and inclusion: The ability to create an inclusive environment in which all students, faculty, and staff feel valued, welcomed, and able to express their opinions and learn from each other.
- Vision for public policy education: A clear view on the role of public policy schools, both in higher education and the broader world of policymaking.

About the Harris School of Public Policy

The University of Chicago's sixth professional school, Harris emerged in 1988 from an interdepartmental Committee on Public Policy Studies. With its origins dating back to 1975, the Committee envisioned an interdisciplinary master's-level program that focused on the use of science and analysis to better understand public life and effect public policy change.

Starting with just five PhD students and 36 master's students, Harris today represents the second-largest master's degree program at the University of Chicago. Harris offers a full range of undergraduate, graduate, and executive education programs ranging from its flagship Master's in Public Policy to innovative programs like the Master's in Computational Analysis and Public Policy, and more.

Guided by its exacting perspective, Harris is empowering a new generation of data-driven policy leaders, helping them turn their passion for doing good into positive social impact across all sectors.

The Legacy of Irving B. Harris

Although he was known as a businessman, Irving Harris' true passion was improving the lives of children through innovative solutions to wide-ranging social problems. He understood intimately the connection between groundbreaking research and work in the field and was instrumental in launching several initiatives and nonprofit institutions, including Project Head Start, the Erikson Institute, and the Ounce of Prevention Fund.

Although he had a wide range of interests, his greatest commitment was to the study of public policy. He believed that societal tensions could be alleviated through effective social policies. Harris led initiatives to launch the new Graduate School of Public Policy Studies at the University and provided its core endowment. In 1990, the University renamed the school in his honor.

Harris remained active in Harris Public Policy programs throughout his life. In 1988, he created the Mentor Program, now an integral component of the School, which matches students with leading policy professionals for one-on-one mentoring relationships in their field of interest. The program is the only one of its kind at any leading public policy institution.

In 1999, he initiated and endowed the University's Center for Human Potential and Public Policy. The Center integrates research and policy perspectives on improving the health, welfare, and development of children and their families.

Harris continues to serve as an inspiration to all of those he touched. His legacy of vision and generosity will continue to motivate people to make a difference.

The Keller Center

The Keller Center, Harris' home, brings together students, scholars, and civic leaders from around the world—fostering collaboration and communication, catalyzing idea exchange, facilitating innovative policy research, and empowering policy ideas that address real needs, in Chicago and around the world.

University Trustee Dennis J. Keller, MBA'68, co-founder and retired chairman and CEO of DeVry Education Group, committed $20 million to Harris, the second-largest gift in the School's history. University Trustee King Harris, chairman of Harris Holdings, Inc. and board chair of AptarGroup, Inc., and his family, provided $12.5 million, adding to their longstanding support of Harris.

Diversity & Inclusion

Diversity and inclusion are essential to policy leadership. Fostering an environment that encourages rigorous inquiry and effective public policy problem-solving requires the involvement and understanding of diverse viewpoints and opinions.

The Harris School of Public Policy has made this commitment a priority as we prepare a new generation of policy leaders to make a positive social impact in their communities and around the world.

Harris' D&I office provides resources and connections for students, faculty, staff, alumni, and more, in an effort to ensure that the Harris community is welcoming and intentional in its commitment to diversity and inclusion. Harris also encourages the free expression of ideas by people of all backgrounds, experiences, and perspectives.

The Harris Council

The Harris Council is the lead advisory group to the Dean and school administrators and is comprised of accomplished professionals with substantial experience in the public, non-profit, and private sectors. The Council's contributions range from providing advice and financial support to interacting with students and connecting the work of Harris to the world.

About University of Chicago

Overview

The University of Chicago is one of the world's premier teaching and research institutions. Founded in 1890 and located primarily in the Hyde Park neighborhood of Chicago, the University comprises an undergraduate college, numerous graduate programs and interdisciplinary committees organized into four divisions (Biological Sciences, Humanities, Physical Sciences, Social Sciences), seven professional schools (Business; Divinity; Law; Medicine; Public Policy; Social Work, Policy and Practice; and Molecular Engineering), the nursery-12 Laboratory Schools, four campuses of the University of Chicago Charter School, a school of continuing education, a medical center, and a marine laboratory in Woods Hole, Massachusetts. A faculty numbering more than 2,000 teaches 7,600 undergraduates and 10,900 graduate and professional school students. Another 3,600 students are enrolled in the N-12 programs in the Laboratory Schools and UChicago Charter School. The University is also home to an award-winning professional theater and a leading art museum.

With approximately 20,000 employees, the University is among the largest private employers in Chicago. Including the Medical Center and the Marine Biological Laboratory, it has an annual operating budget of $5.2 billion and an endowment of approximately $10 billion as of June 2021. The University's Hyde Park campus encompasses 217 acres and 187 buildings, 28 of which were newly built or renovated in the past 10 years, with additional real estate assets in downtown Chicago and abroad.

The University is governed by a 55-member Board of Trustees. The University leadership team is made up of President Paul Alivisatos, Provost Katherine Baicker, 13 additional Officers, and 12 Deans. From its distinctive beginning as one of few research universities in America, to its history of defining disciplines (economics and sociology among them), to its record of Nobel Prize-winning work and its current and longstanding culture of intense rigorous analysis and debate, the University of Chicago is among the most distinguished, distinctive, and reputable institutions in the nation and the world.

Significant Strategic Projects

Over the past decade, the University of Chicago has been on an ambitious path that has raised its eminence and impact locally, nationally, and globally. It has an undergraduate student selectivity of under 5% in the most recent year. The University has invested nearly $3 billion over the past decade in capital projects that have modernized the campus physical plant. In addition, it has introduced new academic programs such as the Pritzker School of Molecular Engineering and invested in growing faculty in several areas (e.g., Economics, Computer Science, Chemistry, and Public Policy). Finally, the University is also on the move internationally with centers in Beijing, Delhi, Hong Kong, London, and Paris.

With a deep commitment to free and open inquiry, UChicago scholars take an interdisciplinary approach to research that spans arts to engineering, medicine to policy. Their work transforms the way we understand the world, advancing—and creating—fields of study. UChicago's scholars lead the country in scientific and technological innovations, often in partnership with the University's affiliated laboratories: Argonne National Laboratory, Fermi National Accelerator Laboratory, and the Marine Biological Laboratory in Woods Hole, Massachusetts. Generating new knowledge for the benefit of present and future generations, the University's research has had an impact around the globe, leading to such breakthroughs as discovering the link between cancer and genetics, establishing revolutionary theories of economics, and developing tools to produce reliably excellent urban schooling.

Located in one of the world's greatest cities, in the Hyde Park neighborhood of Chicago, UChicago is enriched by and invested in the community it calls home. UChicago is one of the largest private employers in Chicago with talented faculty and staff composing a dedicated team committed to the mission of the University. UChicago partners with its South Side neighbors, including the future Obama Presidential Center, on innovative initiatives with local benefits and replicable outcomes for urban universities everywhere. Meanwhile, the University's research and ideas have broad impact, crossing borders to drive international conversations.

The same is true of its diverse and creative students and alumni, who found businesses, create masterpieces, and earn Nobel Prizes.

Motto

The University of Chicago's motto is Crescat scientia; vita excolatur, or "Let knowledge grow from more to more; and so be human life enriched."

New knowledge cannot be formed when hindered by old ways of thinking. By cultivating a wide range of thoughts from peers, students, and the communities where we live and work, we are better able to bring forth ideas that change the world.

Values

- Field-defining research, academic rigor, and world-class education
- Free and open discourse
- Diversity of people, thought, and ideas
- Supporting the community in Chicago and beyond

Leadership

President Paul Alivisatos

Paul Alivisatos serves as the 14th President of the University of Chicago. He is the John D. MacArthur Distinguished Service Professor in the Department of Chemistry, the Pritzker School of Molecular Engineering, and the College, a prominent leader in higher education, and a world-renowned scientist. He joined the University of Chicago from the University of California, Berkeley, where he served as Executive Vice Chancellor and Provost. Alivisatos is also the former Samsung Distinguished Professor of Nanoscience and Nanotechnology and former Director of the Department of Energy's Lawrence Berkeley National Laboratory. As President, Alivisatos serves as Chair of the Board of Governors of Argonne National Laboratory and Chair of the Board of Directors of Fermi Research Alliance LLC, the operator of Fermi National Accelerator Laboratory.

Provost Katherine Baicker

Katherine Baicker serves as the 15th Provost of the University of Chicago. A leading scholar in the economic analysis of health care policy, she is the Emmett Dedmon Professor at the University of Chicago Harris School of Public Policy, where she served as Dean for five years prior to being appointed Provost. Baicker's research focuses on the effectiveness of public and private health insurance, including the effect of reforms on the distribution and quality of care. Before coming to the University of Chicago, Baicker was the C. Boyden Gray Professor of Health Economics in the Department of Health Policy and Management at the Harvard T.H. Chan School of Public Health. She is a research associate at the National Bureau of Economic Research, a director of Eli Lilly, and a trustee of the Mayo Clinic and NORC.

The City of Chicago

Located on the shores of Lake Michigan in the heart of the Midwest, Chicago is home to world-class medical facilities and institutions of higher education, world-championship sports teams, an internationally acclaimed symphony orchestra, renowned architecture, award-winning theater, distinctive cuisine, and much more.

Chicago offers residents and visitors:

- The Art Institute of Chicago, Shedd Aquarium, Field Museum, Museum of Science & Industry, and many other outstanding museums
- More than 200 theaters
- Nearly 200 art galleries
- More than 7,300 restaurants
- 77 community areas containing more than 100 neighborhoods
- 26 miles of lakefront and 15 miles of beaches
- 36 annual parades
- 19 miles of lakefront bicycle paths
- 552 parks

By any measure, Chicago and its environs - known as “Chicagoland” - comprise one of the world’s greatest metropolitan regions. Chicago is a city of exceptional architecture and unsurpassed beauty, generating enormous civic pride.

Chicago has a long established and growing tradition as a center for business and industry, ranging from well-established manufacturing sectors to newer fields like biotechnology. Adding to the city’s reputation as a business and industrial center is its popularity as a premier location for many corporate headquarters. Companies choose Chicago to take advantage of the proximity to transportation, suppliers, customers, similar businesses, and access to a skilled labor force and an extensive urban infrastructure. Five major exchanges are at the heart of Chicago’s financial prominence; 80% of the world’s commodities are traded through three of Chicago’s exchanges. The Chicago Board of Trade is the world’s largest and oldest futures and options exchange, and the Chicago Board Options Exchange is the world’s first and largest stock options exchange.

Chicago offers something for everybody and all on a truly world-class level: art, architecture, theater, music, dance, sports, politics, museums, restaurants, shopping, recreation, and much more.
